

Open Source Release of EDIReader

Tuesday, 15 February 2011

The latest version of EDIReader is now available at SourceForge under the GPL license for open source software. The core EDI parsing framework has been updated in a number of ways since the prior open source release. A number of transaction-specific plugins are included, which allow the generated XML to include elements to mark the segment groupings within a transaction. EDIReader remains available with a commercial non-GPL source license, along with additional plugins and companion products.